A Vote Getter.

Hon. H. V. McChesney, who is making the race for the Democratic nomination for Governor on a state wide prohibition platform spoke in the court house in this city on last Friday afternoon. He was greeted by a large audience, and his speech was well received and much applauded.

He hit the liquor ring some hard rap, and showed the fallacy of their claims that if the state-wide prohibition was adopted in Kentucky, the State would become bankrupt, and the citizens be burdened with exorbitant taxes. Mr. McChesney made it plain that the liquor question was the most important before the people in this campaign, and that it was up to the people whether the liquor ring should be given control of the State. —Pineville Sun.

CANADA TO FEED ENGLAND.

Head of Canadian Pacific to Handle Supplies For Allies.

New York, July 5.—Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, president of the Canadian Pacific railroad, returned to America on board the Red Star liner Lapland, bringing with him authority from the British government to handle all Canadian war supplies for the allies. He has been in London conferring with Lord Kitchener on the war situation for the past month.

Sir Thomas said: "It is untrue that Canada is not getting a just share of the war orders. The Dominion is getting a rightful share, but we expect to speed up production. Canada's new mission is to feed England, as well as supply needed ammunition. We have 25 per cent more land under cultivation than ever before, and we won't encourage recruiting until after the harvest. We shall need all our men in the wheat fields until then."

"Dominion day" was celebrated on the liner with a banquet. The Lapland presented an odd sight to the people at the pier as she was warped in. On her afterdeck were piled scores of sandbags in a barricade four feet high. They were erected as a defense against possible shells from a submarine.

Captain Bradshaw was annoyed when he left Liverpool to discover that on the door of his cabin was written in chalk, "The Kaiser will get you yet."

BECKER TO REVEAL ALL.
Lawyer Says Lieutenant Will Tell With Whom He Divided Graft.

New York, July 5.—Charles Becker in the death house as King Sing was before the police to go to the chair, the names of the police department officials, living and dead, with whom he divided the $100,000 graft money that was wrung from the gamblers and illegal resort keepers in his career as commander of the strong arm squad.

This was the prediction made by the condemned man's lawyer, Martin T. Manton, who gave to the governor the names of the six men who worked the racket, and Becker, the man who let Becker ground out of evil doers. Not all of these men are living, but those that are alive ought to be shaking in their shoes, according to Mr. Manton, because Becker is desperate now that hope is practically gone.

The lawyer himself would not make public the names of the officials accused by Becker. He said that he was bound not only by the ethics of his profession and his promise to Governor Whitman, but was restrained also by the possibility that some of the men named by Becker might be falsely accused. He is certain, however, that Becker intends to tell, and explains that Becker is swayed mostly by the feeling that he doesn't want other men to be used as tools and then cast aside when they are no longer useful and merely dangerous.

Bryan to Speak in St. Louis.
St. Louis, July 5.—William J. Bryan wired a conditional acceptance of an invitation extended to him to speak here July 24, under the auspices of the St. Louis branch of the American Neutrality league, the condition being "if you can make good the guarantee of 50,000 people." The occasion will be "anti-war day" and the exercises will be held in a park. The invitation to Bryan stated the league would guarantee an audience of 50,000. Early meetings of the league here last winter were featured by vigorous hissing of Bryan's name whenever it was mentioned.

MORGAN SHOT BY WAR CRANK

Wounded Twice Before His Assailant Is Overpowered.

New York, July 5.—Declaring that J. P. Morgan, the banker, is responsible for the continuation of the European war, a man, who is believed to be insane, shot the financier at his summer home at Glen Cove, Long Island. Two wounds were inflicted, both of which were slight, one in the breast and the other in the leg.

The prisoner is believed to be of German nationality, although he claims to be an American citizen. He speaks with a marked German accent. The prisoner was brought here and locked up, pending his removal to the county jail at Morris. After his arrest he raved about the war, declaring over and over that Mr. Morgan could end the war if he wanted to.

The police declared that the would-be assassin had brought, besides two revolvers, a match containing six sticks of dynamite, a bottle of nitroglycerin and several flaming caps.

The man, who later asserted that his name is F. Holt and that he lately was an instructor in French at Cornell university, arrived on an early train upon the Long Island railroad and approached M. P. Ford, who operates a taxicab service in Glen Cove.

"I want to be driven to the residence of J. P. Morgan," he said. "I want you to take me there quickly. I am in a big hurry."

The man was well dressed and Ford's suspicions were in no wise aroused by the request. The distance to "East Island," the Morgan country place, which is almost surrounded by water, was quickly covered. When the Morgan place was reached the stranger got out of the cab and as he paid his fare he remarked to the taxicab driver: "This is the man who is responsible for the European war."

At the same time pointing toward the palatial mansion nestled among the trees.

Passing up the driveway the visit to the hall, which was answered once by a butler. "I wish to see Mr. Morgan at once," said the man. As an after thought he added, as though to insure his seeing the banker: "It is very important."

The butler disappeared, but after a moment returned, saying: "Mr. Morgan regrets to say that he can not see you because he is very busy."

This roused the stranger's anger. "Won't he see me?" he snarled, drawing a 38-caliber revolver from his pocket. "He will see me. He is responsible for this war and it has got to stop. He is the man who has written it."

Hits Morgan Twice.
The butler upon seeing the weapon gave a shout of fear and Mr. Morgan, who was reading in his library at the time, hurried out to ascertain the cause of the commotion. As Mr. Morgan appeared the butler, mastering his fear, grappled with the assailant, who was shouting: "I can not help. I must see Mr. Morgan. This war has got to stop. It has gone too far now. I've come here to serve my country."

In the scuffle the weapon was dropped, but the would-be assassin, breaking the butler's grasp, drew another pistol, a 22-caliber weapon. "Help my country," he shouted at the financier, who had stopped short at the sight which greeted his eyes.

Before Mr. Morgan could say anything the man leaped to fire. One shot struck Mr. Morgan in the leg, the other a flesh wound, and the other struck him in the side. The financier retained his presence of mind and started forward for his assailant. The man had accused the household servants were pouring in from all directions. Even the housemaids took part in overpowering the man.

The butler had picked up a heavy brass coil rod, which he hurled at the stranger, striking him in the forehead and knocking him down. In the meantime, Mr. Morgan, not knowing how badly he was hurt, he staggered into his library and collapsed in a chair.

While some of the servants were telephoning for help, others were bristling for the police, others were caring for the financier, and still others were trussing up the prostrate man, who was now confidently believed to be an anarchist.

When Dr. Zabari arrived he made a hasty examination and immediately assured the family that Mr. Morgan's wounds were slight and that no fears need be felt.

Constantine Frank McCall arrived and took charge of the prisoner. The stranger, his face and clothes covered with blood from the cut in his forehead, was in the hall of the Morgan home, shouting at the assembled servants who glared back at him. "I was sent by God to do this," screamed the man. "Nobody helped me. I am an American citizen. I am willing to pay with my life for what I have done."

It was evident the man thought he had killed Mr. Morgan.

Holt resides in Theda, N. Y. He is a native of Dallas, Tex., and a son-in-law of F. S. Sensabaugh, presiding elder of the Dallas Methodist church. Holt was former professor of French at Cornell university.

The stock market suffered only slightly from the news of the attempt on the life of Morgan. Prices slumped when the first news was received, but they quickly recovered.

JUSTIFY SINKING OF ARMENIAN

German Naval Officials Say She Attempted to Escape.

London, July 5.—The German admiralty at Berlin issued two statements, one justifying the destruction of the Leyland liner Armenian and the other denying the Russian claim that a German cruiser of the type of the Magdeburg had been sunk in the Baltic.

The statement supporting the destruction of the Armenian by the submarine U-38 was evidently called forth by the fact that a number of Americans lost their lives. This statement follows:

"In regard to the sinking of the Armenian, it is ascertained that the captain refused to heave to when ordered to do so, and for an hour tried to escape. In his own words, he did not want to give up without a fight. He only stopped his ship when twelve or thirteen men lay dead upon the decks. The submarine acted in strict accordance with international law throughout."

In regard to the Russian report that a German cruiser had been destroyed off the Courland coast, the admiralty issued the following succinct bulletin: "The Russian report that one of their torpedo boats sank a German cruiser is a pure invention."

Naval Battle in Baltic.
Details of the naval battle between Russian and German cruisers in the Baltic sea apparently were lost in the fog which enshrouded the scene of the engagement.

It is reported from several sources, but not officially confirmed, that the battle was renewed and that thirty torpedo boats, being cruisers and twenty torpedo boats, are participating.

Petrograd claims that a Russian cruiser or squadron drove a German cruiser ashore, but all unofficial reports agree that the vessel which met disaster was the mine layer Albatross and that twenty-one of the crew were killed.

Petrograd claims that the German vessels retired before the Russian at sea while unofficial accounts of the engagement declare that Russia's warships had to retire before superior numbers after a battle lasting half a day.

Turkish Boats Sunk.
Petrograd, July 5.—A Russian submarine has sunk three Turkish vessels in the Black sea, the admiralty announced. The destroyed vessels were a steamer of 2,500 tons, a sailing ship of 1,500 tons and a steamer of 400 tons. All were sunk near Keskier. The Turkish vessels were laden with coal and provisions which they were transporting to Constantinople.

WHERE IS VON HINDENBURG?
Landon Says His Name Has Disappeared From Official Reports.

London, July 5.—One query frequently heard in military circles is, "What has become of Von Hindenburg?"

For more than two months now no answer of it has been obtainable. The official reports of the German army of Tannenberg and the two German sweeps of Poland has disappeared from official and unofficial reports as utterly as if he had forsaken his command and left army.

There can be only theories to answer. By some it is thought that the field marshal, who was a national idol, is now preparing to lead the Germans into Russia by way of the Baltic provinces and perhaps to command the advance upon the Gulf of Riga. The other theory is due to reports received more than a month ago that the kaiser as well as his favored officers were inclined to be jealous of the popularity of the grim old warrior. They were perfectly willing to divide the eastern operations among the other generals if they could, and hence since the Carpathian drive began the names always mentioned have been Von Hindenburg, von Linsingen, who has received the order Pour le Merite; Von Woyrsbach and the Austrian commanders.

General Orozco Missing.
